“ Alice Jean, I’m gonna miss you, girl. You never changed on me—you stayed real, kept me laughing, and made every moment unforgettable.

I’ll never forget the “feet on fire” tradition 🕯️... and how you somehow set mine ablaze. I’m weak just thinking about it. When you say my name, you’d be like, “aye aye Ta Ta Tasha”... lol.

Enjoy those skies, my girl. 💙

My Army friend Alice from Fort Riley, KS and Vicenza, Italy. I decided last evening, Jan 28, 2026, to look you up only to see that you are no longer with us. Thanks for the fun times and memories in KS, even when you, me, and Vickie Smith drove my Toyota Celica from KS to St Louis, to DC, visiting family members. Again I saw you in Italy where we had a chance to work together. We really had some good times. I wish I had looked you up sooner. May God bless your family, and may you rest in heaven. Always, Brenda Braxton Hackett

“ When I first moved on my own, my aunt took me to Walmart so she could get me some food as a new home gift. While we were in the store, I grabbed some meats, canned food, and some seasoning. While grabbing that stuff, I grabbed some cleaning supplies, dishwashing liquid, bleach, and stuff like that. Mind you, she told me she was using her stamps, and at this time, I didn't really know how stamps worked. I was fresh from my mom's house; she did all the shopping at that time. So, to stamps, I was . So, we finished shopping and we hit the register. The lady scanned everything. My aunt slide, her stamp card took the balance for the food, because that's what stamps do. I was slow as hell grabbing the bags, because I thought everything was paid for. My aunt looked at me like, "Aye, nephew, these stamps, you still got to pay for the cleaning products." I looked at her confused about what she was talking about, like when a dog tilts its head to the side. I know I just saw you slide your card. She starts laughing and was like, "Don't worry about it, I got it," and pays for my stuff. When we left, she was still laughing, and I was now laughing with her when I realized how naive I was at that moment. She then told me what I can buy and can't buy, like the name of the card tells you what to buy. We laughed again, and she took me home. That's a memory, a learning one, a funny one, and also a caring one. This shows some of the qualities that made up the type of person my aunt truly was.
