“ All of my photos of you in OneDrive surfaced today as a slideshow on my phone. I can't believe it's been two years since you left us. There's been no ample way to say goodbye to you. And I don't know that I ever will. I remember all of our wild laughs and deep conversations ... summers in DC ... which you taught me was more a vibe than a place.
You were always such a self-proclaimed city girl who always carried your country roots in your stories and in your laughter.
I'll come back to this space year after year ... just to remember.
