“ I met Sandra in the summer of 2019 and we became instant friends and more. Her honest, unassuming, warmhearted, adventurous personality was irresistible. Together we set about recapturing the exuberance of youth. In spite of Covid and the hundreds of miles between us (I live in NY), our relationship grew. We also had ideological differences: She leaned right and I left. But, we didn't shy away from our differences, instead, we discussed them openly and respectfully. This was in large part due to Sandra's easy-going temperament and a rare ability to evolve emotionally and intellectually. This is not to suggest that she came around to my way of thinking; it simply means that we both grew through effective communication and tolerance. Together we weathered the storms that sink lots of relationships. I feel blessed to have met her and devastated by her passing, but I will always hold the fond memories of the remarkable times we spent together.
